Shock and sadness after body found in reservoir

Authorities say clothing matches that of missing Boston College student Franco Garcia ◐ Family confirms identity following seven-week search

▶ State police officials found the body of missing Boston College student Franco Garcia in the Chestnut Hill reservoir.

Close to 100 people attended a vigil at a Waltham church last night after a body believed to be that of Boston College student Franco Garcia was pulled from the Chestnut Hill Reservoir yesterday morning.

After weeks of searching and posting fliers throughout the community, those close to Garcia tried to seek some closure and make sense of what may have happened to the Newton native, who was described as a talented clarinetist in his college's marching band.

"His friends are all devastated and heartbroken, but there is a little bit of relief and a little bit of closure knowing that the 'where' is answered," said vigil attendee Rachele Reis, a friend and bandmate of Garcia's.

But the why and how remain unknown, she said.

Police said they are not ruling out foul play, but they were hesitant to make assumptions.

"Our hearts go out to the Garcia family and his many friends at Boston College. More than ever, we need to remember them in our prayers."
UNIVERSITY PRESIDENT WILLIAM P. LEAHY, S.J.

Suffolk DA Dan Conley said he couldn't say what happened to the Newton native, who went missing in February, until an investigation is complete.

An autopsy of the body is expected to take place either today or tomorrow, according to officials.

"It is our hope we will be able to offer more detailed information about [his] last hours ... and how he passed away," said Conley.

Conley said clothing and items on the body were consistent with those worn by Garcia the night he disappeared after leaving a bar in Cleveland Circle seven weeks ago.

As family members left the scene Wednesday in tears, Garcia's uncle confirmed the body was his nephew's.

Underwater plants entangle search

Authorities said thick vegetation at the bottom of the reservoir might have played a factor in the delayed discovery of a body, believed to be Franco Garcia's.

According to Massachusetts State Police spokesman David Procopio, "heavy weed conditions" in the water hindered a preliminary search conducted after Garcia was reported missing.

The remains of a young man of Garcia's age, build, and description were recovered from a spot about 18 feet from the shore.

That area was murky and dense with weeds, according to state officials.

Feds deport Somerville man wanted for murder

▶ Ferreira de Souza

Brazil native allegedly killed elderly taxi driver and stole more than $40 Suspect exhausted all appeals

A man from Brazil recently living in Somerville and Medford was deported yesterday to his home country where he is wanted in connection with a murder.

Jose Rogerio Ferreira de Souza, 20, was illegally living in the communities just north of Boston, according to U.S. Immigrations and Customs Enforcement.

He allegedly used the name Mauro Jorge to disguise his identity while living in Massachusetts. It was unclear for how long he lived here.

Ferreira de Souza was transferred to the custody of Brazilian law enforcement in Sao Paulo yesterday.

He was arrested in February 2011 in Danvers after police received a tip that he was living in the Boston area.

"The delay in his deportation was due to the numerous appeals that Ferreira de Souza had made before the Executive Office for Immigration Review and the Board of Immigration Appeals," federal officials said in a statement.

His final appeal was dismissed Feb. 17.

Ferreira de Souza allegedly participated in the 2008 robbing and killing of a 68-year-old taxi driver. He and two accomplices allegedly stole about $40, tied the driver with barbed wire and beat him with a stick until he died.

Department of Homeland Security agents working in Brazil confirmed Ferreira de Souza's identity through biographical details and photographic facial identifiers. It confirmed that he was indeed the person wanted by authorities in Brazil, authorities said.

Since October 2009, federal agents have removed more than 335 foreign fugitives from the United States who were being sought in their native countries for crimes including kidnapping, rape and murder.

Leaders take on pay gap

At 80 cents on the dollar, Mass. worse than US average for women's earnings compared to men's ◗ Legislators pressing bill on equal pay

Equal Pay Day next week

While women legislators held an Equal Pay Day event at the State House yesterday, the national Equal Pay Day is slated for Tuesday.

- The date of the event, April 17, symbolizes how far into 2012 women must work to earn what men earned in 2011, according to the National Committee on Pay Equity.
- Because women earn less, on average, than men, they must work longer for the same amount of pay. The wage gap is even greater for most minority women, according to the committee.

METRO

As the Bay State continues to lag behind the national average for equal women's earnings, a group of female state legislators is pressing a bill concerning equalizing pay for women in comparable jobs as men.

"I don't think that there is any single issue more important to women than this because this is where the rubber hits the road … in terms of women being equal to men," said state Rep. Cory Atkins.

Atkins spoke during an Equal Pay Day event at the State House yesterday. Equal Pay Day is a national day organized by the National Committee on Pay Equity to bring attention to the wage gap between men and women.

Women in Massachusetts earn about 80 percent of what their male counterparts make, according to the U.S. Bureau of Labor Statistics. The national average is about 81 percent.

Quoted

"Our gap is unusual, because we have the talent and demonstrated experience to close this gap." BUDSON

The gap in Massachusetts is unique, said Victoria Budson, the founding executive director of the Women and Public Policy Program at Harvard's Kennedy School of Government, due to the state's unique education levels.

"There's no other state where women are as educated as in Massachusetts," she said.

Jacqueline Cooke of the Women's Bureau at the U.S. Department of Labor said the agency is trying to push young women to take or look for jobs in nontraditional fields such as science, math or green technology. "One reason women are paid less is that they work in jobs that are traditionally considered women's jobs," Cooke said.

While progress has been made to balance the pay between men and women doing the exact same job, work still needs to be done on pay equity for comparable jobs, legislators said.

A bill meant to define comparable work for employers is headed to the state Senate Ways and Means Committee.

"It's a very minor step, but it's a step toward achieving equality," said state Sen. Patricia Jehlen of Somerville.

Zimmerman is arrested, charged in Martin death

GETTY IMAGES

▶ Members of the National Action Network watch from Washington, D.C., as Angela Corey announces the charges.

A special prosecutor in Florida charged neighborhood watch volunteer George Zimmerman with second-degree murder yesterday in the shooting death of unarmed black teenager Trayvon Martin — a move that protesters had been demanding for weeks in the racially charged case.

Zimmerman was under arrest at an undisclosed location in Florida, officials said.

Special prosecutor Angela Corey's decision came 45 days after the fatal shooting in a quiet gated community in the central Florida town of Sanford.

Police had declined to arrest Zimmerman, who is white and Hispanic, based on his account of self-defense, setting off civil rights demonstrations around the country.

"I can tell you we did not come to this decision lightly," Corey told a news conference in Jacksonville.

"Let me emphasize that we do not prosecute by public pressure or by petition. We prosecute based on the facts of any given case as well as the laws of the state of Florida."

Apple accused of price fixing

Apple Inc. and publishers Penguin and Macmillan have decided to fight U.S. government charges that they conspired to fix the prices of e-books, even as three other publishers agreed to a settlement aimed at lowering prices for consumers.

The Justice Department accused Apple of colluding with the five publishers, as the Silicon Valley giant was launching its iPad in early 2010 and was seeking to break up Amazon's low-cost dominance in the digital book market.

The settlement reached with three of the publishers will allow Amazon.com Inc. and Barnes & Noble Inc. to resume discounting books, and will terminate the "most favored nation" contracts with Apple. REUTERS

Manson, 77, who has skipped attendance of his parole hearings in recent years, was not present for yesterday's review of his case by the state Board of Parole Hearings at Corcoran State Prison, where he is serving a life term.

The state Corrections and Rehabilitation Department said Manson would next be eligible for parole in 15 years, when he would be about 92 years old.

Reality rescores 'Obamacare'

Metropolitik

BRAYDEN SIMMS

POLITICAL WORLDLINESS FOR AN IMPOLITE WORLD

@METROPOLITIK

For complaints, suggestions and digital attaboys, e-mail us at brayden.simms@metro.us.

Bust out the noise-makers, America, because we did it! Against all odds, under an ineffective executive and a deadlocked legislature, we've somehow managed to completely snuff out the troublesome U.S. deficit. Our long national nightmare is over!

Oh, you didn't hear this? You may actually have but just don't fully realize it. That's partly because the issue is quite wonkish and difficult to succinctly explain, and partly because of the pervasive journalistic problem of false equivalency. We're going to do our best to break down these issues.

This Tuesday, a report by Republican politician Charles Blahous made the rounds, inspiring another round of spin. The media response was unsurprising; even we ran an article yesterday asking, "'Obamacare' could worsen US debt?"

Blahous had rechecked the costs of health care reform and found them to be off by some $340 billion. To do this, however, he had to break from the traditional methods both parties use to score all legislation.

It all comes down to trust funds, and here's where things get hairy. Medicare funds, like those of other entitlement programs, are distributed via trust fund. This system, generally disliked by conservatives, applies a sort of guaranteed security to these programs, making it difficult for politicians to cut them.

SCOTT J. FERRELL/GETTY IMAGES

▶ "Hello, world? Yeah, it's me, Charles Blahous. Can we change objective reality as we know it? Cool, thanks."

When these trust funds run out politicians simply refill them, because entitlement programs are very popular with voters. These funds are, after all, paid by government bonds. This is why the Congressional Budget Office estimate of the law's costs assumed that Medicare payments would continue even after the fund empties.

Blahous takes issue with this established method and so pretends it doesn't exist. But it does, of course, and will most likely continue to do so.

Turns out an interesting thing happens when you ignore our arcane budget realities: The real problems disappear. Using the Blahous logic, we needn't worry about rising entitlement costs at all; these programs will, you see, stop paying out as soon as their funds empty. Problem solved!

If only. "If we did things that way," says Medicare expert Paul Van de Water, "a lot of stuff would look different." But we don't, and it doesn't.

Do you follow? If so, congratulations. The finer points of budget law are too difficult for most journalists — let alone the average consumer — to understand. Which brings us to the problem of equivalency. Since issues like these can be too nuanced for laymen to fully grasp (we spent six hours researching and still feel out of depth), many reporters revert to "he said this, she said that" rather than qualifying the factual accuracy of individual claims. This allows journalists to ignore the small matter of whether their sources are lying.

In more ways than one, Blahous teaches us what we gain from ignoring reality.

THE WORD

Metro's Dorothy Robinson shares her take on the world of gossip @dorothyatmetro dorothy.robinson@metro.us

The feed ...

▶ Checking in with some of Hollywood's biggest names to see what they've been up to — in their own words, in 140 characters or fewer.

Today, Justin Bieber doesn't mind the haters, Lady Gaga is feeling the burn, Joan Rivers makes a better crack at Jennifer Lopez than I do and Jimmy Kimmel is not a fan of magic.

@justinbieber: nothing like being doubted every single day of your life...and u just turned 18 and they are ready to write u off. = INSPIRATION

@ladygaga: Just killed back to back spin classes. Eating a salad dreaming of a cheeseburger

@Joan_Rivers: Just read that J.Lo gave her boyfriend Casper Smart a pickup truck for his birthday. He can't wait until he's old enough to drive it.

@jimmykimmel: Scientists have discovered that time moves slowest when your Uncle shows you a card trick.

Readers respond: A little background on J.Lo's 'gift'

PHOTOS: GETTY IMAGES

For Tuesday's Word, I wrote about Jennifer Lopez, 42, "gifting" beau/backup dancer Casper Smart, 25, with a custom white Dodge pickup truck for his birthday. Apparently, Lopez "knew that Casper really wanted a truck, and Casper was very excited about the generous gift," a source told People magazine. "Casper was so excited about his new truck that he decided to drive it to dinner."

In the column, I made a crack about how 1. That "source" sounded like a quote-giving robot and 2. How I was surprised that Lopez didn't buy him a Fiat considering all the shilling she does for them. This was not the joke to make! Check out my reader mail:

▶ "You may need to do some more digging. Chrysler/Dodge/Ram are owned in part by Fiat, which helped bailout Chrysler! That is why he got a Ram Truck from J. Lo and not a Ford F-150!"

▶ "Did you really not know that Fiat and Dodge are both owned by Chrysler LLC, when you wrote that J.Lo dreck?"

▶ That woman in the background is making the same face most of you made at Tuesday's column.

▶ "I feel obligated to point out that Fiat holds a considerable financial and developmental stake in Chrysler (who makes Dodge and Jeep vehicles). It wouldn't be too much of a stretch to assume she used an "employee discount" (if any money was spent at all) on that Dodge truck."

In my defense, I am only a recycler of celebrity gossip, not a hard-hitting journalist who knows the ins and outs of the car industry. However, thanks to my eagle-eyed readers, who do know such things, we all now know that this "news item" and "gift" was a total plant by Fiat and that truck was free in exchange for press. Duped!

So, really, do celebrities ever pay for anything? Or do they just have to save their cash for when they will inevitably need a high-priced divorce lawyer?

Bobbi Kristina Brown will be on your TV

Bobbi Kristina Brown, the daughter of late singer Whitney Houston, has reportedly made a verbal deal to star in a reality TV series, according to Radar Online. "This show is being done against her family's advice," a source says. Brown, who is reportedly dealing with her own substance-abuse issues, is "obviously very wild and misguided," the source adds. "Bobbi is scared the world will label her just like her mother."

Talking points

Lindsay Lohan strikes back

Lindsay Lohan isn't taking her latest legal attack lying down. A woman has accused the troubled actress of attacking her in a nightclub last week, and now Lohan wants police to investigate the accuser and arrest her for filing a false police report, according to TMZ. "If it's true that someone made false accusations against Ms. Lohan and reported those false claims to police, we will take appropriate action, which includes seeking the prosecution of that individual," Lohan's attorney tells the website.

Cruz loves motherhood

With a 1-year-old son at home, Penelope Cruz is starting to consider cutting back on her career for the sake of motherhood. "Maybe I'll make one movie a year, maybe two, but it's not going to be more than that because I have other priorities now," Cruz tells Harper's Bazaar. "I talk about him all day long, even to strangers in the street. It is my favorite subject! But, you know, this is my job." Cruz and husband Javiar Bardem welcomed son Leonardo last year.

Is the Seal/Klum divorce getting ugly?

Seal is striking back at Heidi Klum, reportedly disputing her divorce petition, according to TMZ. The main issues he takes with her filing? Seal insists there are "community and quasi-community assets" that need to be divided up, while Klum claims a postnuptial agreement addresses that. In addition, Klum cites Jan. 19 as the official start of their separation, while Seal says the date hasn't been determined. Seal is also asking for joint physical custody of their children instead of Klum's proposed full physical custody. "Given that he's away a lot on tour, giving her primary physical custody is pretty much status quo," the source says. And both parties are reportedly asking to deny spousal support to the other.

Princess Di in a 'Bodyguard' remake?

Kevin Costner reveals there were plans for a sequel to "The Bodyguard" — with Princess Diana interested in starring as herself. "Diana and I had been talking about doing 'Bodyguard 2,'" Costner tells Anderson Cooper in an interview set to air next month. "I told her I would take care of her just the same way that I took care of Whitney [Houston]." Costner was eager to work with her. "She wanted me to write it for her. I said 'I'll tailor it for you if you're interested.' She goes, 'I am interested,'" Costner remembers, revealing that he received a draft of the script the day before Diana died.

Trend of the week

White's hot

This is a look that is painfully easy to pull off (hurrah) and reliably chic. A win-win, no? The trick is to wear it head to toe — like ivory trousers and a matching blazer as a fashion-forward update on the work suit, or white shorts and a coordinating button-down as a light way to ease into spring. Just don't eat any condiments with your lunch that day. KENYA HUNT

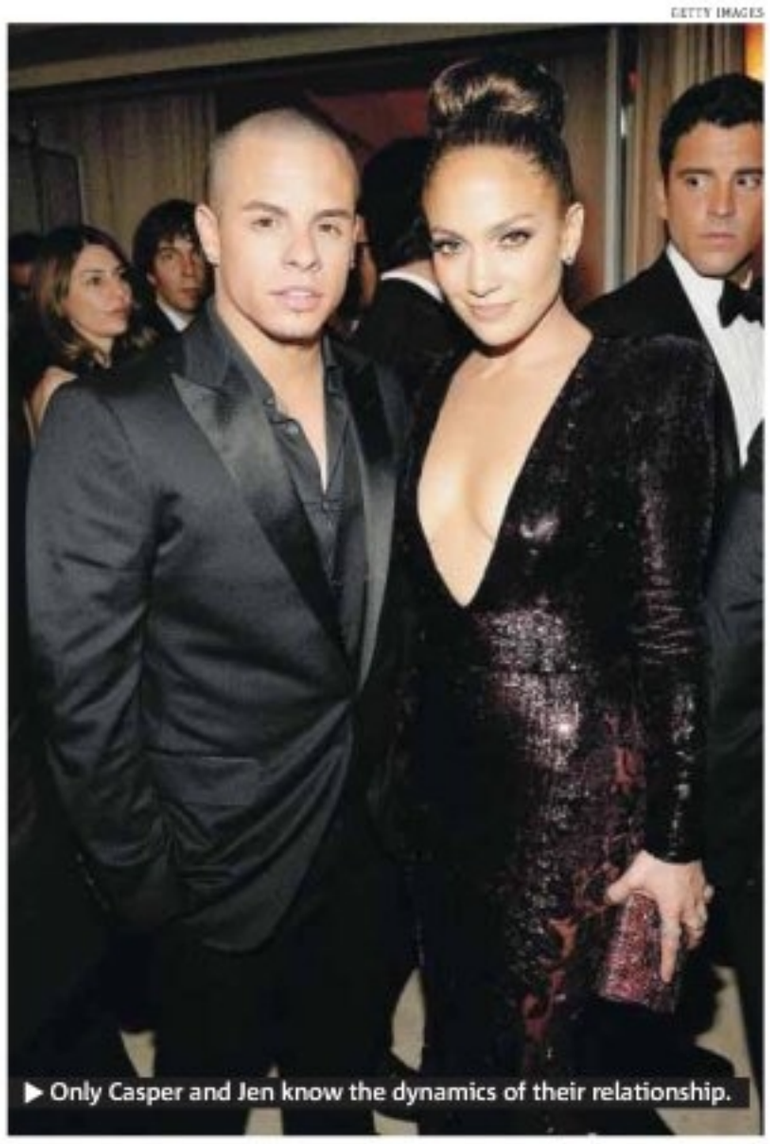
Do you know best who's right for you?

GETTY IMAGES



▶ Only Casper and Jen know the dynamics of their relationship.

Shrink Wrap

DR. JANE GREER

HEALTH.METRO.US

When we read about Jennifer Lopez and her boyfriend Casper Smart, we can sense some disapproval. He is often referred to as her boy toy or dancer boyfriend. The implication is that they are not on the same level. If this is the way the tabloids are handling their coupling, you have to wonder what her friends might be saying to her. Are they concerned this is a rebound relationship following her divorce from Marc Anthony? Are they telling her that Casper isn't good enough? Whether you are in a relationship or just starting one, everyone is going to have an opinion — and typically it's that you are with the wrong person. So who do you trust: you or the people who think they know what's best for you? What should you say to those naysayers?

In JLo's case, there is no question that Casper hasn't achieved the professional success she has. But does it matter? The answer is: only if it bothers her. It is important to know when to go with what feels right for you. This might be a time in her life when she wants to lighten the mood a little, or maybe she likes the age difference. Or maybe he is much more her equal than any of us know from where we stand.

How to silence the haters

Here is the strategy for what to do when they disparage your relationship. Begin by asking what their specific concerns are. Then, you can respond by saying you are aware of the possible problems and are dealing with them. Or, if it is something you have not considered, you can listen and agree to give it some thought. The goal is to convey to them why your partner is important in your life and thank them for their concern.

If you can be clear about why you are with someone, it will be much easier to deal with the negative remarks that might otherwise ignite your doubts. Once you have that clarity, you are equipped to handle people's criticisms about your choice of partner.

Jennifer and Casper look pretty happy in the pictures we see. It's hard to argue with that.

Voter fraud: Real, or just a fraud?

RE: "ACTUALLY, VOTER FRAUD ALIVE AND WELL": I agree very much with Mary Stone: Every voter should have ID. In fact, today every person that's legal should carry ID. I don't know what it is that people have to fear, if you are not doing anything wrong. On another note, if women would stop dressing like ladies, men would stop groping them. That's not sexy, and I know fashion.
BLANCA HERNANDEZ, VIA E-MAIL

Mary Stone forgot to tell us that there is no universally accepted definition of voter fraud. She forgot to tell us that voter fraud is widely believed to occur when an imposter physically shows up at the polls and attempts to vote, but this is extremely rare. Ms. Stone also forgot to tell us how difficult it is to get an ID card when you don't have a birth certificate. What else did she forget?
HERB WHREN, VIA E-MAIL

In wake of voter ID suits, how hard is it to get an ID? Is it too much to ask that you should feel the pain of dealing with a government you are voting for? DAN HUBER, VIA E-MAIL

Mary Stone is a perfect example of someone who believes everything she reads on the Internet. Half of the cases she mentions have been completely debunked. Voter fraud is no more a factor in our elections than it has ever been. As a percentage, prosecutable cases of voter fraud exist 0.0007 percent of the time. This is well within the margin of error in every election. Voter ID laws remain what they have always been — a means to deny legal Americans the right to vote.
JD DUCAS, VIA E-MAIL

Don't trust Koch plant on Obamacare

RE: "OBAMACARE COULD WORSEN US DEBT?": It's a good thing you put that question mark in your headline for "Obamacare" because the answer is a resounding "No!" The ACA will save the government money by raising taxes on the investment income of the richest 2 percent and cutting out corporate welfare in excess Medicare Advantage payments. Blahous is a Koch-funded partisan at a Koch-funded propaganda mill. He used faulty assumptions and bad math to create a right-wing talking point. Sad to see no one checked before publishing this false attack.
KEVIN DOWD, VIA E-MAIL

I'm deeply disappointed Metro ran a story on the so-called study conducted by Charles Blahous. Blahous — who as a Medicare trustee tried to privatize the program — deliberately ignored both the savings and new revenue Obamacare will generate, which will ultimately reduce the deficit. Its a dishonest polemic, and I'm at a loss why Metro wasted space on it.
JOSEPH CONNELL, VIA E-MAIL

Speak truth to power, Metro!

RE: "US PENDULUM TILTS TOWARD SOCIALISM": I find the responses to Mr. McCloskey's letter quite disturbing. The New World Order attack on our country is verifiable in David Rockefeller's autobiography "Memoirs." Metro, keep up the good work of publishing letters despite the leftist complaints!

Horoscope

♈ Aries March 21-April 19. You won't be looking for a free lunch, though your desire for material accumulation will be quite strong. You'll be prepared to work for what you hope to get, and that's a good thing.
♉ Taurus April 20-May 20. In addition to your flair for detail, you'll have another dimension that could serve you well. It'll be your ability to see whatever is important to you in its entirety.
♊ Gemini May 21-June 20. It does you no good to be overly anxious about matters that affect your material well-being. Just keep on top of the things that make you a profit, and you'll be fine.
♋ Cancer June 21-July 22. If you're required to make a decision that would affect others as well as yourself, remain calm. Fortunately, your judgment is exceptionally astute in this current cycle.
♌ Leo July 23-Aug. 22. Give it all you've got, because your efforts will not go unnoticed or unacknowledged by persons who sit in judgment of your work. Once you gain their respect, you'll become a favorite.
♍ Virgo Aug. 23-Sept. 22. In case you didn't know, imitation is the sincerest form of flattery. You're likely to be surprised when someone whom you thought disliked you starts to copy your every move.
♎ Libra Sept. 23-Oct. 23. Something in which you're involved could start to produce far more than you ever thought possible. It's time to take another look at your endeavors.
♏ Scorpio Oct. 24-Nov. 22. Although you are likely to be far more dynamic when dealing with friends on a one-on-one basis, you should be able to get along with just about everybody at present.
♐ Sagittarius Nov. 23-Dec. 21. Even though your prospects look encouraging both materially and financially, large rewards are likely to come only from special efforts on your part.
♑ Capricorn Dec. 22-Jan. 19. If you can, hang out with persons you know socially — they could prove lucky. If you have any pressing problems, they'll be the ones to help.
♒ Aquarius Jan. 20-Feb. 19. It's OK to put trust in your faith, because that's what will get the job done. Believe in your creed, it won't let you down.
♓ Pisces Feb. 20-March 20. Over the next few days, two separate friends could play enormously important roles in your affairs. Each will help you make a dynamic change in your life in different ways.

One thing I love about Boston is that no matter how handsomely appointed the bar room, no matter how fancy the crowd, you can always find a group of drunk guys yelling at the game on the TV. So it went on my recent trip to Gem, the new offering from Big Night Entertainment, the group behind the similarly spiffy Red Lantern, among others.

Taking its name and design flourishes from the downtown jeweler's district, they've carved out an exceptionally gorgeous, luxe lounge on the second floor of the historic old building that previously housed Kennedy's Irish pub. The smallish bar space — there are two adjacent wings for a dining room and a lounge — is opulently appointed, but welcoming, with literally the most comfortable bar seats I can remember. There's no question that this is going to be a very successful outing from the already successful restaurateurs, with well-heeled people lined up to get in on weekends.

I just won't be one of them, personally. On my way in, the door man politely informed me that they will be enforcing a dress code soon. (All employees seemed polite all around.)

As for the dress code, I suppose you wouldn't want scum-bags like me in here bumming everyone out. It might pop the illusory luxury bubble created by spending up to $4,500 on bottle service. (That's for the Louis XIII de Remy Martin cognac.) Or $7 Coronas. At least that's what the bros on my left were drinking. The group of girls to my right were sucking down vodka sodas. I wonder why creative bartenders even try to swim against the stream of mediocrity sometimes. If only great-looking, potentially amazing spaces like this could put some of their money into improving the general public's drinking taste.

Cocktail options better than they need to be

I will miss having another crack at the green onion tater tots with Russian dressing, however. And I'm happy to see on the drinks menu an Aviation, made with Cherry Heering instead of Marschino; a variation on a Blood and Sand called the Smokey Quartz made with Dewars White, Cherry Heering, Carpano Antica and orange juice; and a Sazerac, albeit one of the hardest-shaken ones of my life. Not sure I would've ever ended up going near the $18 Gemvara cocktail made with Grey Goose La Poire, Gran Marnier 100, lemon juice and Moet Imperial though — but I suppose we'll never know.

ART

Peter Simon and Ronni Simon
Today through April 26
Yes.Oui.Si.
19 Vancouver St., Boston
Free, 617-429-9771
www.yesouisispace.com
This is a dual exhibition of two apparently unrelated Simons. Peter is a photographer who captured some of the greatest pop/rock stars and protests of the '60s and '70s, and more recently, the Occupy movement; Ronni is a jewelry artist and sculptor whose intricate creations have been sported by Blake Lively and the Sports Illustrated swimsuit models. One of these Simons is related to Carly, but we don't want that to be the selling point, so you'll have to go to the exhibit to figure out which one.

Free, 617-557-2007

Though many now take for it granted, human rights is a concept which is of relatively recent vintage in our history — and one that is hardly universally acknowledged. The speakers are Unitarian-Universalist minister William Schulz, providing the religious perspective, and human rights law professor John Cerone, providing the secular perspective. Jasmine Waddell moderates.

'Cafe Variations'

Friday through April 22
Cutler Majestic Theatre
219 Tremont St., Boston
$25-$75, 617-824-8400
www.artsemerson.org
This musical sets songs from the catalogue of George and Ira Gershwin to a story by Charles L. Mee, Jr. that explores the human drama in a single cafe. It harkens back to the days when cafes were social environments, not just places for screwing around on Facebook and pretending to do homework. Not that those things don't have a place.

Thursday through May 13
Central Square Theater
450 Mass. Ave., Cambridge
$15-$40, 866-811-4111
www.centralsquaretheater.org
This play tells the fascinating story of Henry Molaison, a man who lost his ability to form new memories after experimental brain surgery for epilepsy at 27. But science has a way of making good on its mistakes, and the study of his tragic case led to discoveries that radically altered and expanded our knowledge of how memory works.

At first we were wondering what Eminem's pretty much autobiographical 2002 film could have to do with science, but it's paired with a guest lecture by Dr. Charles Limb of Johns Hopkins on the cognitive science of freestyle rapping. It's a great fit, even if Eminem's response would likely be an indignant, "You can't research me!"

DANCE

Riverdance
Friday through Sunday
Boston Opera House
539 Washington St., Boston
$25-$95, 866-523-7469
www.boston.broadway.com
This Irish step dance spectacular, now on its farewell tour, has inspired plenty of jokes — but the people who tell those jokes are wrong. "Riverdance" is a mesmerizing, exciting entertainment spectacle. It's also terribly impressive. They keep their bodies so stiff up top but so spry down low! Try that without breaking your hip, and maybe then you can call it corny.

Pauly Shore

Wilbur Theatre

Back in the '90s, Pauly Shore perfected the comic persona of the SoCal teen who's short on brains, but long on slang. If that persona was obnoxious, it's because he nailed it so well. Nowadays, his weird life and "washed-up" status fuels his material — which, like his old character, is smarter than it seems. ● MATTHEW DINARO

A BRIGHT 'FUTURE THIS'

- The Big Pink keep the huge hooks coming with their new album
- Band's co-founder talks pop, 'weird music' and Nicki Minaj

The Big Pink may be best known in America as the band who supplied the main sample for the Nicki Minaj song, "Girls Fall Like Dominoes," but their new album, "Future This," may be a chance for them to step outside the shadow of "Pink Friday." The latest release from the British band, which is centered around singer and guitarist Robbie Furze and synth and beats programmer Milo Cordell, is full of the characteristic huge chorus hooks that made Minaj first take notice — and should soon make the rest of the world's ears perk up.

"I kind of love that pop that comes from all of the greatest bands — The Beatles or the Stones or The Beastie Boys or Nirvana," says Cordell. "I think that's what we enjoy doing, writing hooks."

But Cordell says that this preference for combining out-there sounds with catchy pop may have worked for those groups, but it's definitely not a fail-safe formula.

When your 2009 song, "Dominos" became last year's "Girls Fall Like Dominoes" single, that must have been a great push to expose you to American audiences. How did the Nicki Minaj collaboration come about?

"Dominos" had been around in England, and it was kind of a hit in England. It bubbled away everywhere, and we got an e-mail where our manager said to us, "There's this guy, a producer called JR Rotem, who is writing a track for this female rapper and they're using 'Dominos' as the main sample," and we're like, "Cool." And we never really heard anything about it.

You didn't hear who it was?

Nothing. ... And then they sent it through literally just before her album dropped and it was Nicki Minaj and we were like, "F—!" It was around the time that Kanye had come out with "My Beautiful Dark Twisted Fantasy" and all that, and we were super aware of Nicki Minaj and we thought that she was amazing.

That's funny. Have you met her?

No, she doesn't return our calls.

She just borrows your hooks?

She's welcome to do that anytime. We've actually borrowed one of her hooks. In "Dominos" now when we play it live, we sample a bit of "Super Bass" and we kind of flip it up a bit and sing "Dominos" on top.

You guys are not only bringing underground to pop, but you're also bringing more pop to the underground.

Which is a dangerous thing to do, I think, because it can leave you in a complete no-man's-land. The people who like pop think you're weird, and the people who like weird music think you're pop.

Finish this hypothetical snippet of conversation: "Oh, The Big Pink, yeah they're cool. They kind of sound like ... "

Ideally, it'd be a table of beautiful girls talking about us. [But as far as who we would want people to compare us to,] it's kind of like Jesus and Mary Chain, My Bloody Valentine, Smashing Pumpkins, Nirvana, Beastie Boys and Chemical Brothers.

Say Anything's ringleader, Max Bemis, impressed us mightily with his 2003 debut, "Is a Real Boy," which fused California pop-punk, classic rock, indie artistry and musical theater into one of the most diversely creative works ever plastered with the term "emo." His subsequent work has been less daring and vital, but he still ranks among pop-punk's most charismatic and distinctive performers.

▶ HR is fronting legendary hard-core band Bad Brains again.

The legend: In the late '70s, a noodly DC jazz-fusion band discovered the Ramones and, blown away, were miraculously transfigured into a furious punk band called Bad Brains. The Brains' levels of speed were unheard of, their chops blasphemously overqualified for punk's amateurish aesthetic, their songwriting a perfect balance of hooks and raw power. And lo and behold, the hard-core genre was born. MATTHEW DINARO

McQuaid out for Game 1

Bruins defenseman Adam McQuaid will be out tonight against the Capitals (7:30, NESN). A decision on Johnny Boychuk will be made today. METRO

Tito wants little to do with Sox

Former Red Sox manager Terry Francona said that he will not take part in the team's 100th anniversary celebration at Fenway Park next week due to the way he was treated toward the end of last season.

"Until I'm more comfortable with some answers on what happened at the end of the year, I don't want to have much to do with the organization, and that's a shame," Francona told The Boston Globe, citing that he was upset that organizational sources leaked information about his marriage and his alleged addiction to painkillers.

Francona said that he and Red Sox President Larry Lucchino got into an argument this week over the phone regarding the invitation. METRO

Underwhelming Alex

Ovechkin hasn't been himself this season Is he getting hot at the right time or will downward spiral continue? Game 1 tonight at Garden

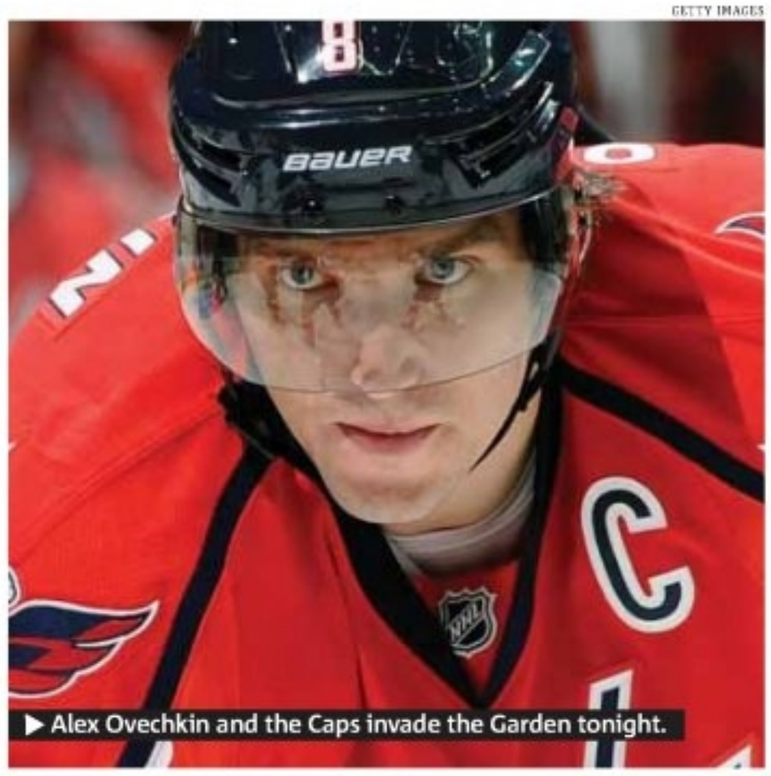
By most accounts, Alex Ovechkin wasn't Alex Ovechkin this year.

Sure, he tallied 38 goals this season, six more than he posted in 2010-11. But his assists dipped by 26, and he finished the season with a minus-8 plus-minus.

Just three years ago, he signed the richest contract in league history. The deal suggested that Caps management knew it had the game's top offensive weapon. But things are now different in the NHL and even the Caps front office has taken notice.

"The game has changed since Alex entered the league and we are looking for him to be a better all-around player," Washington owner Ted Leonsis told The Washington Post in March. "We want him to adapt his game to be productive within the framework of our team, not necessarily in comparison with others in the NHL."

GETTY IMAGES



▶ Alex Ovechkin and the Caps invade the Garden tonight.

Ovechkin has already played a role in getting a coach fired (Bruce Boudreau) this season due to lackluster play and had a mixup with old friend and Washington defenseman Dennis Wideman at a Caps practice.

If there was ever a season for Ovechkin to just fizzle out, it would be this one. The fact that he will be matched up against Zdeno Chara for the majority of the seven-game set offers even more reason to believe that 2011-12 will not end well for No. 8.

MLB: WHO IS FOR REAL?

The baseball season is one week old. If this were football, it would be just past halftime of the first game.

With that in mind, everyone should step away from the ledge. There's no reason to get too high or too low on anyone. However, we'll need to make quick judgements on guys that are off to fast starts:

Tight fastball

Jeff Samardzija was a tight end for Notre Dame and then a relief pitcher. Don't be scared. That 8 2/3 inning gem he tossed last week was for real. His stuff is nasty.

Wired for Omar

In the last five seasons, Omar Infante hit a total of 22 home runs. In the first five games of this season, he smacked three jacks. Without any speed to speak of, we can confidently leave Infante on waiver wires.

Hosmer, Homer

If you've slept on the Royals' offense over the last few years, you've missed value. And this year will be no different. Eric Hosmer is off to a piping-hot start because he is one of the best young hitters in the game. Jump on board early here, as Hosmer is still just 22 years old.
